AND FLYING TO ONE OF THE BASES.

A SMALL GLACIER.

IT'S ALL VERY INTERESTING,
(ALTERNATING LAYERS OF TUFF AND LAYA)
TWO VIEWS OF THE ICECAP.

THE CHRISTIANSEN GLACIER.
A small little iceberg

Slightly bigger

And then the big one.
SOME CLOSER VIEWS OF THE BIG ONE.

THE INTREPID EXPLORER!
The ice cap overhangs!

The glacier to the left of our landing place.
The ice floes in front of the glacier.

The ice breaks up.

Another glacier heavily laden with moranic material.
GOOD COLUMNAR STRUCTURE.

THE SEA ERODING CAVES INTO THE COLUMNAR LAVA MASS.

A WELL FORMED SEA ARCH.
(DEVILS ARCHWAY)
A HIGH CLIFF OF COLUMNAR LAVA.

THE DIVERS GO DOWN INTO WATER AT -2 ° CENTIGRADE.

LT. WAGENFELD, ADIVER AND IVOR GERHARD.
Charlie and Mr Albertyn.

Sending up a weather balloon.
Fumaroles just below the snow line. (x)

The hot spring (x) gets ready,

And blows!
Approaching the glacier, I saw a sheltered sandy beach.

And we made a landing, at last!
THE RECEPTION COMMITTEE.

FANIE KRUGER THOUGHT THEY LOOKED VERY FUNNY.

THEY WERE INDIGNANT ALL RIGHT.
Hundreds of them up on the spur.

And down below, some sea elephants, lying in the "sun."

Two good looking penguins.

AN ALBATROSS PASSING CLOSE BY.

AND SOME PICKING UP REFUSE FROM THE GALLEY.
THE SEA WAS ALIVE.

TWO DOLPHINS RACING THE NATAL.

A BOUVET FISH SPECIMEN.
THE SHACKELTON bringing post......

.... to be dropped by parachute

HERR DAUBITZER, SELF AND THE CAPTAIN,
(Physics Dept, U.S)
LT. COMMANDER FORTHROPP.
THE CAPTAIN AND THE SHACKELTON.

THE PARACHUTIST AND THE POSTAGE CANISTER WENT SKIMMING BY AT ABOUT 5 KNOTS.
The parachute got stuck below the ship and a diver had to go down to cut it loose and retrieve the postal canister.

The canister is brought alongside.
LT. DOLLEY (NO. 1) OPENS IT UP.

MERR DAUBITZER, SELF, MR. ALBERTYN,
ALAN POOLE AND IVOR GERHARD.

MAN THAT CAPE PENINSULA LOOKS GOOD!
